

Isaac Kappy Faked his Death

by Miles Mathis

First published February 9, 2023

Within in an hour of publication, this paper went to the first page of a Bing search. Already censored by Google.

I just stumbled on the whole Isaac Kappy thing tonight. Kappy is the actor who was outing Hollywood bigwigs as pedophiles, appeared on Alex Jones, made a long last video, and was found dead a few days later. As usual the internet sells us two possibilities: he either committed suicide or was murdered. But also as usual, the truth is behind door number three: it was faked. Here's how I know.

- 1) He allegedly jumped from a bridge into traffic, being hit by a camper (or Ford truck). But the clue is where this happened: Bellemont, AZ. Kappy wasn't living there, so why did he choose to jump there? Bellemont is about six miles outside of Flagstaff to the west, on I40. It is also Rte66, our first clue. They would have preferred Rte666, but that wasn't available. An even bigger clue? This was actually within the borders of Arizona National Guard Camp Navajo. That's right, this happened on a military base. Camp Navajo Fire Department was in spitting distance. That bridge he supposedly jumped from is the entrance to Camp Navajo.
- 2) Camp Navajo isn't just National Guard, it also contains Lockheed Martin, Air Force, Navy, DIA, NASA, and Defense Logistics. So it is basically a joint military base, with miles of underground tunnels and railroads. Indicating it may be far larger than it appears on the surface. Globalstatistics admits it house $7 billion in munitions. Regardless, a very suspicious place to find a suicide on the doorstep. It would be like finding a suicide on the front porch of Langley.
- 3) They decided to release many pictures from the scene of him splattered on the pavement. These pictures prove the fake for many reasons. First, it is against all protocol to release pictures of splattered victims of suicide, for obvious reasons. It isn't done. If the military decided it needed to be done for reasons of national security or something, they would still need permission from his family to do so. Which means we are supposed to believe his family signed off on this for some reason. Why would they do that? Second, if you were hit by a camper or truck going 70 miles an hour, you would look much worse than that. His only real injury is to his head, with two black eyes and maybe a broken nose. His body is fine. They have poured some fake red jelly on the ground to make you think that is brain matter that leaked from his ear, I guess, but it is not convincing at all. The whole thing is ridiculous, and as usual the blood doesn't look like blood. It is bad moulage. Third, the photos have been put through photoshop, and you can see the usual telltale signs of that on his head. Fourth, the photos were taken on the street, and they actually stopped all traffic so that they could take photos of the corpse for many minutes. You would expect them to load him onto the ambulance and drive him to the hospital, not stand there taking pictures as he bled out on the pavement. Fifth, this wasn't a crime scene, it was a suicide, so there was no reason to be taking crime scene photos as forensics. We see many people standing around, as investigators, photographers, EMTs, I don't know. That makes sense only if they knew beforehand he was Isaac Kappy and that this was suspicious. But how would they know that? How did they know who he was? They shouldn't have known until they got him to the hospital, or at least got him into the ambulance, checked his ID, and called him in. Unless we are to believe that all EMTs in Bellemont, AZ, know Isaac Kappy on sight, even with two black eyes. So the whole thing is staged, as usual.

- 4) Those attending Kappy aren't EMTs and there was no ambulance. They are Ponderosa Fire Department in a small fire truck. Was Kappy on fire? No, Ponderosa Fire just happened to be about a block away. Again, that is convenient. The Fire Department was on-scene immediately with a full camera crew, to do forensics. The DPS spokesman, Bart Graves, later lied about this, saying State Troopers were called to the scene. Except that we see no State Troopers there. We are told this was at milepost 185. Is that really crucial information? No, it is just to get aces and eights in there. Later it was discovered Bart Graves is not DPS, but a former Warner Brothers TV producer and Democratic Party bigwig in Arizona. So why was he giving the press conference on this suicide, pretending to be a law enforcement spokesperson? Now you know.
- 5) Speaking of aces and eights, when did Kappy appear on Alex Jones? August 1, 2018. 8/1/18.
- 6) Kappy's car was allegedly found nearby. We are told it was a Hyundai with a blown-out front tire. Right. Because Jewish actors from rich families always drive Hyundais with bald tires. Are we supposed to believe Kappy drove to this location on a flat tire, or that he had a flat and just went, "That's the last straw, I'm outta here!"
- 7) They admit Kappy's parents didn't identify the body. Again proving the fake, since no one else should have been able to.
- 8) Tom Hanks, one of those outed by Kappy as a pedophile, soon took a roadtrip to Flagstaff to photograph the scene himself, posting a picture of a white glove on the side of the road on Instagram with the question: "Roadkill? I hope not!" Many have seen that as gloating over the death of an enemy, but I see it as another inside joke, albeit a very bad one. As with the shoes we see in these fake events, this glove looks like another signal. Best guess is Kappy is a lover of Hanks and Green, all of them Bosom Buddies having a laugh over this whole thing. It keeps your eyes off more important things.
- 9) Kirsten Dunst, another cousin, added to the inside joke by posting a strange pic of a Woody from Toy Story doll (voiced by Hanks) on the ground with a toy truck in the background flipped over. His head is on a sheet covered in deltas or pyramids. No way they would post such tasteless jokes if they thought Kappy was really dead. Even if Kappy had been a real enemy, you don't tempt fate by joking about his suicide: speak no evil of the dead.
- 10) The photos disprove the story in another way, and I can show you that without showing you anything gory.

What am I showing you there? The shadows. See how long the shadows are? This happened in mid-May, so the sun would be quite high in the sky during the day in Arizona. But here, the sun is very low, indicating it is very early morning. Why does that matter? Because that is exactly the time you would expect them to shoot this fake event, since if they run it early enough they only have to shunt a small amount of traffic off the interstate onto the access road. This is when most Hollywood movies shoot action scenes, as we have seen. Before 7:00am, there is very little traffic, so it is far easier to redirect it. We are supposed to believe this was shot on a Monday, but I suggest it was shot the day before, on Sunday, again to get the least traffic. The timestamp on the video says we are looking at 2:50pm, but that is Z-time, so we have to subtract 7 hours for Arizona, giving us 7:50am. But the reports say the first call came in at 7:26am, so those guys must have been there at least 20 minutes filming a corpse. How about get him out of the road? If the call came in at 7:26, he probably jumped a few minutes before that, putting us about 7:15. But no one commits suicide by camper at that time of the day, for obvious reasons—not enough traffic.

Still don't believe me? Well, we have pictures of Kappy before he jumped:

That's convenient, right? He brought his own camera crew. Or we are supposed to believe some girls just happened to be on that bridge filming dudes with their cellphones for fun, at 7:00am on a school day? His head looks strange, too, doesn't it? Why is it square in the back? Why does he look compressed vertically, like he weighs about 120 pounds?

I also know because in support of that, I watched his entire final video, out of pure curiosity, and he gives us many hints his death is about to be faked. He says he is going away but that he is not under duress, is not suicidal, and not in any particular danger. All he says is that he made a huge mistake, which is easy to guess: he agreed to be bought off. He even says so, admitting he was bought off for far too little. If they bought him off, they didn't have to murder him or suicide him, did they? They just moved him to some island and cut off his internet privileges. No more interviews for Kappy.

He says he is like a Judas, selling out the movement. He says we will all be very disappointed and angry with him, and I take it he means the Qanon people, who felt betrayed by his suicide and the way it was spun by the mainstream. The whole series of events was dismissed as the ravings of a troubled man, throwing a temporary wrench into the pedophile ring story.

Does this mean I now believe Kappy? No. These people are very bad people, and we know that from their selling the vaccine. All of Hollywood is complicit in mass murder, in my opinion, so I wouldn't put anything past them, including pedophilia. So I leave that question open. My problem with Kappy is that he continued to say some very strange things in that last video, that had nothing to do with pedophilia or Hollywood. The weirdest, in my opinion, was his claim that "Junior" was going to save us all. Someone asked him about that and he confirmed that yes, he meant JFK Jr. He implied Junior was some sort of savior and hero who was going to soon ride in and save the day. I have no problem with the idea Junior is still alive, since that was my theory before it was Q's. But what evidence did we ever get from Junior while he was admitted to be alive that he was some sort of savior? I have never bought the idea that the Kennedys were battling the swamp, and I don't buy it now, anymore than I buy the idea Trump is. They were always a prominent part of the swamp.

Kappy also says that he betrayed Q and MAGA, “the biggest military operation of all time”. That's sort of revelatory, isn't it, confirming what I told you long ago: Q comes right out of military intelligence and CIA. It is another project, and not the one you are being sold.

Another big problem I have with Kappy is that he talks about Jesus over and over in the video, as if he is a practicing Christian and fervid believer in Christ. Unlikely, since the Kappys are Jewish. Isaac's genealogy is scrubbed everywhere, most noticeably on his Findagrave page, which does exist. But the money guess is that Kappy is a variant of Kaplan, a famous Jewish name from Hollywood. Think Gabe Kaplan. See also billionaire Thomas Kaplan, CEO of Electrum and the world's largest private collector of Rembrandts. Also Stanley Kaplan, of the SAT prep manuals. Also Nathan Kaplan, fake New York gangster during Prohibition. Also Mordecai Kaplan, prominent rabbi who founded the Reconstructionist movement in Judaism. The name means they come from the priestly class, or Kohens. So if Kappy wanted to embrace religion or spirituality, you wouldn't expect him to embrace Jesus. To me this means he was crafting his message to his MAGA audience, which he knew was mainly Christian.

Plus, just look at his photos under title. He is obviously Jewish and obviously a scumbag, as he admits himself. I can tell that at a glance. Can you imagine any real people trusting that guy or thinking he was a hero? Kappy reminds me a lot of Abbie Hoffman:

You can barely tell them apart in some photos. Are they related? Possibly. Abbie Hoffman wasn't his real name, as he admitted on the stand in court in the Chicago Eight trials. He was Abbot Howard or Howard Abbot, we aren't sure, but probably the latter.

After a bit more digging, I discovered the Kappys are descended from the Kapy de Kapivars, Jewish Counts of Budapest, Hungary, who moved to Missouri in the 1880s and married the Wises and Warings. I assume Kapivar refers to Kapuvar, a very old town in Hungary that would link these Counts Kapy to the Esterhazys, who owned the huge castle there that still stands. They admit the Esterhazys were originally Salamons, but nonetheless try to pretend they weren't Jewish.

Also notice that Kappy is underneath some bird there. What bird? Since he is from Albuquerque, it is probably supposed to be a Thunderbird.

But it isn't. Yes, when it is used by Natives, it is a Thunderbird. When it is used by Jews, it is a . . . Phoenix.

Another clue is that Kappy's long talk seems to be coded in many ways. He says over and over and over that what he did was DUMB, DUMB, but never says stupid or idiotic or any other synonym, as a normal person would. It stood out to me, and then going over the specs of Camp Navajo, I realized why: DUMB=Deep Underground Military Base. So possibly as part of his project, he was required to spend a few months there until this blew over. He may have been promoted in CIA or other intelligence, doing advanced training for his next assignment, which we can only hope is more interesting than this one. There is also the possibility that, like Sharon Tate, Nicole Simpson, Dorothy Stratten, and others, he is hiding as his brother David, who has a couple of pics online and looks very much like Isaac. David is not on his relatives list at Instantcheckmate. Also not on the relatives list of Heath, Jane, Glen, Louis, Wendy, or Dale. So the big computers have never heard of David Kappy of Albuquerque, related to this family. In fact, we get zero results for David Kappy in all of New Mexico, at Intelius, too. Which is strange, given that there are pictures of David Kappy doing a mural in Albuquerque.

I don't actually think that is Isaac, but there is some mystery here.